SUBJECT: Digging for gold?

Hi, %PERS_NAM%,

Nick Osborne from AWAI here with a quick question for you...

Why did the discovery of gold near Sutter's Mill in 1848 spark a huge gold rush?

It's estimated that over 200,000 people from all over the world made the journey to California during the next four years.

Likewise, there were gold strikes in Colorado and later in Alaska and the Yukon Territory of Canada. These later gold strikes also prompted large numbers of prospectors to go off in search of treasure.

Why is that? Why would people travel so far to dig for gold?

The obvious answer is - that's where the gold was. It had been discovered there. It was proven to be there. If you are inclined to dig for gold it's probably a good idea to dig where the gold is, don't you think?

And the same is true in your freelance copywriting business. If you're prospecting for customers and clients, you need to look where they already are.

I hope you were able to join Rebecca Matter and me on our call yesterday because during that call Rebecca made a terrific comment. She stated, "If I knew my customers were in the next room, I'd go to that room and engage with them."

So where are your customers?

Today we are in the midst of a spectacular change in where your customers spend their time. And this change will directly impact your ability to earn income as a freelancer.

You can continue to prospect for customers and clients where you have been and likely find fewer and fewer new clients. But... prospect where your potential clients are proven to be and strike it rich.

Are you ready?

If you were on the call yesterday, you know I'm talking about the shift from traditional internet usage to social media.

Facebook now has about 700 million users. Many millions of those users never use any other site. They log on to Facebook in the morning and never visit a traditional website during the day. Besides connecting with friends, they use Facebook to browse, shop, and make purchases directly on a company's Facebook page.

It's estimated over 3.5 billion minutes are spent on Facebook every day. This is not additional time people spend on the internet. This is time that is no longer spent on traditional websites. Social media is literally transforming the web.

You simply cannot ignore this change. A huge segment of your prospects spend time on Facebook, Twitter, and other social media sites. To be successful as a freelancer, you must engage your clients and prospective clients where they are proven to be.

That's why I developed How To Make Money As A Social Media Expert.
